Cray-cray for Mei Mei: Food truck to open restaurant

Brick-and-mortar. The popular Boston food truck will soon set up an immobile shop in Audubon Circle.

A trio of street food-slinging siblings have found a permanent spot for their mobile culinary craft.

Mei Mei Street Kitchen, a locally sourced Chinese-American food truck, has raised $35,000 on Kickstarter to open a brick and mortar restaurant in Audubon Circle, near Kenmore Square.

The online fundraising campaign, which closes today, has far surpassed the crew's original goal of $28,000. Thanks to the financial support, Mei Mei will likely open at 506 Parks Drive by August.

"It's been in the back of our minds since the very beginning," said Margaret "Mei" Li, who opened the truck in 2012 along with her brother, Andy, and her sister, Irene. "The food truck was a great test model for us to try out different dishes. We're definitely going to keep it running, but we're realizing after big snow storms that it's important to have a location that can function through the winter." The truck, which is open year-round, bounces around the city serving roughly 250 customers during the lunch rush. The street kitchen has spiked in popularity over the last year, but Li said her family is particularly delighted about the new venture.

"Our parents are both doctors, so when we all decided to go into food trucking, they were like, 'What?' But now they're really happy for us," said Li.

The 1,300-square-foot eatery will feature energy-efficient equipment, solar shades and insulation, recycled floors, walls and counters and a compost program. The owners are also looking into planting a rooftop garden.

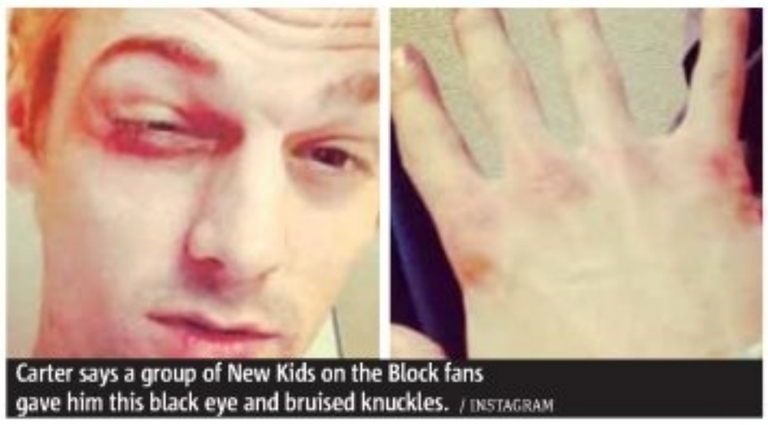
Aaron Carter: NKOTB fans jumped me



Carter says a group of New Kids on the Block fans gave him this black eye and bruised knuckles. / INSTAGRAM

Former teen pop sensation Aaron Carter claims he was beaten up Saturday during a visit to Boston, and that the perpetrators were four hardcore New Kids on the Block fans who didn't want Carter on the group's turf.

Carter, 25, is the younger brother of Backstreet Boys singer Nick Carter. He gained recognition as a pop and hip-hop singer in the late 1990s.

Instagram photos show a black eye and bruised knuckles. Carter told TMZ he was in Boston to perform, and was leaving a restaurant on Saturday night when one of the alleged culprits — a grown man — approached him and said, "I heard you're doing a show here tomorrow. This is the town of the New Kids."

A Chevy Malibu pulled up, according to Carter, and three more men jumped out.

"I think my knuckles might be broken, but that's what they get," Carter told the TMZ. "People think I'm a pretty little white boy, but no way. I think I won. I'm still standing."

He also tweeted to a New Kids on the Block star, "Eh @jordanKnight this one of your homies? He got his ass handed to him last night but his boys got me.. #Soldier."

The singer did not file a police report because "it's girlie," he said. MORGAN ROUSSEAU

Murder probe

Divers search water near Hernandez's home

Divers from the Massachusetts State Police yesterday searched a pond and heavily wooded area near New England Patriots tight end Aaron Hernandez's home in North Attleboro.

Investigators reportedly arrived around 10 a.m. and used metal detectors in an area around his property. Hernandez has been the center of a murder investigation since last week, after the body of a 27-year-old Dorchester man was discovered near his home. METRO

Cop foils T theft

A 58-year-old Roxbury man pleaded not guilty Friday after he allegedly grabbed a shopping bag from the hands of a fellow T passenger and tried to flee.

Authorities said Richard Williams grabbed the bag from the 44-year-old woman as the two traveled on the Route 23 bus Thursday afternoon. He tried to flee the bus, but was stopped by a Boston police officer who heard the victim's scream for help and stopped Williams right across the street from the bus stop.

Whitey trial. FBI: Bulger named names and gave misinformation to feds

Alleged mob boss James "Whitey" Bulger gave information to federal agents in an effort to lead investigators away from himself and his gang for their alleged murders, often assigning others blame for murders the feds now accuse him of committing, documents show.

Prosecutors introduced hundreds of pages of documents as part of Bulger's FBI informant file as the 83-year-old's racketeering and murder trial continued yesterday.

The documents, which consist of reports from meetings between Bulger and multiple FBI agents, span decades.

One document details how Bulger gave information to agents two days after the killing of Brian Halloran, who authorities allege Bulger gunned down when they learned he was talking to the feds. The report said Bulger told investigators that the mafia, a gang from Charlestown and some low-level criminals had reasons to commit the murder.

Yesterday's testimony could not have been easy for Bulger to sit through. Bulger's lawyers have repeatedly insisted that Bulger was not an informant and that corrupt FBI agent John Connolly made up the reports to further his career.

"They can't have it both ways to say he's a fraud and then to rely on the credibility of his reports," Bulger attorney Hank Brennan said during an objection. He took issue with prosecutors introducing reports that were written by the now-imprisoned Connolly.

Also yesterday, Agent James Marra of the federal inspector general's office discussed Bulger's informant file. At one point during his testimony, Marra was asked to run off a laundry list of names of people whom Bulger had provided information on to FBI agents. Many of the names involved members of La Cosa Nostra, or the mafia. MICHAEL NAUGHTON

Weeks due this week

A federal prosecutor said that a key witness in the government's case against Bulger could testify later this week.

- Kevin Weeks, a former associate of Bulger who is described as his right hand man, could testify as early as Thursday or Friday.
- Prosecutors had originally said that Weeks would testify closer to or after July 4, but now he's due early because of the rapid pace at which the trial is proceeding.

Bombing suspect's mother to attend hearing in Boston

Headed to court. Zubeidat Tsarnaeva claims she will attend Dzhokhar Tsarnaev's hearing in July.

Tsarnaeva / GETTY IMAGES

Zubeidat Tsarnaeva, the mother of accused Boston Marathon bomber Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, told the BBC that she plans to leave Russia to attend her son's July 10 hearing in Boston.

It will be her first trip back since the bombings and she told the news agency that she is nervous, but that she wants to support Tsarnaev, 19.

"I will not let anyone to take my son away. They took my Tamerlan away, but I will not allow them to take away my Dzhokhar," she said. "I really hope my son is not going to be long there. As soon as my son gets out, I will take him, I will grab him and I will leave that country."

Tsarnaev is accused of setting off two deadly bombs by the Boston Marathon finish line on April 15, killing three and injuring hundreds more. His older brother Tamerlan Tsarnaev, who was also suspected in the attack, was killed three days later during a shoot out with police. Dzhokhar has been detained at Fort Devens since late April.

Tsarnaeva and her ex-husband, Anzor Tsarnaev, have given mixed answers to whether they would return to the U.S. They moved to Russia after living in Cambridge for a decade.

Tsarnaeva has maintained her sons' innocence in interviews. She told the BBC Sunday: "I am their mother. I give them the birth. I brought them up. I raised them by giving them love. Special love. We never talked about killing. The word killing in our house had no place. So of course I am sure that my kids never would do this."

Murder trial

Clash on shooter's motive in Trayvon Martin murder trial

Jurors in a racially charged Florida murder trial heard sharply contrasting versions yesterday of who was the aggressor in a struggle that ended with the shooting death last year of unarmed black teenager Trayvon Martin by a volunteer neighborhood watchman.

Don West, a defense attorney for George Zimmerman / GETTY IMAGES

In a fiery opening statement in a Seminole County courtroom, Assistant State Attorney John Guy said evidence would show that the accused murderer, George Zimmerman, had spun "a tangled web of lies" about the shooting in February 2012.

As the trial opened in earnest after two weeks of jury selection and evidentiary rulings, the prosecutor opened by bluntly quoting from Zimmerman's call to a police dispatcher after first spotting Martin.

"F—ing punks. These a—holes, they always get away," Guy repeated. Guy told the jury those were the "hate-filled words he used to describe a total stranger." REUTERS

Snowden stays hidden as Russia resists US pressure

Edward Snowden was set to be on this flight from Moscow, but was not. / GETTY IMAGES

Safety. The leaker has been looking for a country that can guarantee his security.

Edward Snowden's whereabouts were a mystery yesterday as Russia resisted White House pressure to send him back to the United States or stop him continuing on his journey to escape U.S. prosecution.

Snowden was allowed to leave Hong Kong on Sunday despite Washington asking the Chinese territory to arrest him on espionage charges.

Julian Assange, the founder of anti-secrecy group WikiLeaks, which is assisting Snowden, said the 30-year-old had fled to Moscow en route to Ecuador and was in good health in a "safe place," but did not say where he was now.

There are no direct flights to Ecuador from Moscow, and reports that he would fly there via Cuba were put in doubt when witnesses could not see him on the plane, despite tight security before takeoff. A WikiLeaks spokesman muddied the waters by saying an approach had also been made to Iceland for asylum.

Ecuador, which is already sheltering Assange at its London embassy, said it was considering Snowden's request for asylum and that human rights were its main concern. REUTERS

Not on board

All eyes on seat 17A as reporters head to Cuba

A planeload of journalists strapped themselves in for a $2,000 flight from Moscow to Cuba with Edward Snowden. Their first disappointment was that Snowden didn't show up. The second was that it was a booze-free flight.

Ecuador gives a refugee document of passage

WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange said that Edward Snowden had received refugee papers from the Ecuadorean government to secure him safe passage as he fled Hong Kong.

"In relation to Hong Kong, Mr. Snowden was supplied with a refugee document of passage by the Ecuadorean government," Assange told reporters from inside the Ecuador embassy in London, where he has been himself hiding from arrest for more than a year. REUTERS

Talking point

The name 'North West' explained

So there is actual sane reasoning behind Kanye West and Kim Kardashian naming their daughter North West. A report from TMZ says that Kim and Kanye believe North is "their highest point together as a couple ... the pinnacle of the relationship ... and they consider her their 'North Star.'"

That is adorable. But didn't they factor West's last name into this decision? That she is going to sound like a direction for her entire life? Where is the explanation for that?

1 'Independence Day' seeks independence from main star

The first update to the 1996 smash hit "Independence Day" will be in theaters next year. Remember that movie? That was Will Smith, right?

Well, it was confirmed via director Roland Emmerich in an interview with the Daily News that he'll be overseeing the follow-up to the blockbuster, but without one certain bold-faced name.

"Will Smith cannot come back because he's too expensive, but he'd also be too much of a marquee name," Emmerich said. "We have like, maybe half of the people that you would know from the first film (in the script) and the other half ... are new."

According to Emmerich, the plan is to turn "Independence Day" into a franchise with two films currently in the works, entitled "ID Forever, Part 1" and "ID Forever, Part 2."

If launching a sequel 18 years after the original seems weird, it is. Emmerich agrees.

"We're not doing a total reboot; we're doing something that's totally unusual," he said.

2 Paula Deen to finally appear on 'Today'

Days after being a no-show on the "Today" show, Paula Deen will be on tomorrow. "She has told us she will be here this time," Matt Lauer said on-air yesterday morning in announcing Deen would appear.

To say that Deen has had quite the week is an understatement. The Food Network very publicly fired her on Friday after The National Enquirer revealed, via a courtroom deposition, that she repeatedly used racial slurs. And yesterday, Smithfield Foods announced it dropped her as its spokeswoman.

3 Jim Carrey distances self from 'Kick-Ass 2'

Well, here is a publicist's worst nightmare: Jim Carrey is publicly distancing himself from his upcoming super-violent comic book film, "Kick-Ass 2," in light of his recent anti-gun stance. "I did 'Kick-Ass' a month [before] Sandy Hook, and now in good conscience, I cannot support that level of violence," Carrey posted to Twitter. "My apologies to others [involved] with the film. I am not ashamed of it, but recent events have caused a change in my heart."

4 Fun summer family adventures

Summer is here, and it's time to get up, get out and explore with your kids. They'll totally ace the "How I Spent My Summer Vacation" essay if they partake in any of these.

1 Become a junior park ranger

Most of our national parks, monuments and historic sites offer a Junior Ranger program, enabling kids to learn about these sites while completing a series of educational and observational activities. Some parks, like Badlands National Park in South Dakota, even have a Junior Paleontologist program. Meanwhile, certain states, like Georgia and Maryland, also offer Junior Ranger programs in their state parks.

Your child can be a Junior Paleontologist at Badlands National Park. / NATIONAL PARK SERVICE

2 Visit an oddball museum or factory

Surprise your kids with a museum visit they'll never forget. The National Mustard Museum in Middleton, Wis., for example, has more than 5,500 jars of mustard that make up The Great Wall of Mustard. Or, milk a mechanical cow and enjoy all the free ice cream samples you can eat at the Turkey Hill Experience in Lancaster, Pa. Other offbeat favorites include the SPAM Museum in Austin, Minn.

The National Mustard Museum hosts its "tribute to the king of condiments" on Aug. 3, National Mustard Day. / PROVIDED

3 Get picking at a fruit festival

Summer is ripe with fruit festivals, with lots of favorites — like cherries, peaches and blueberries — in season. Grab a basket to fill up on pie-filling favorites. Many festivals also have hay rides, bike rodeos and concerts. At the National Cherry Festival in Traverse City, Mich., you can even participate in a cherry pit spitting contest. If you go to the Hopkins Raspberry Festival in Minnesota, don't forget to hunt for the golden raspberry.

4 Take a nature hike

Grab your backpacks and hike a park trail to a waterfall or lake. Caves and hollowed-out trees are also particularly fun to discover. Make sure to bring water and protein-rich snacks to keep energy levels high. Wear shoes you don't mind getting muddy, and gauge the fatigue factor to make sure your kids aren't too tired by the time you reach a turnaround point on your hike. Download the free AllTrails app to find local trails for hiking and biking.

Sneak math into summer

Learning. Help your child find out, 'Are we there yet?'

This summer, when your child asks, "Are we there yet?" on that family road trip, you can bust out a new answer.

Surreptitiously relating everything to math helps children use their noggins in the summertime, suggests Glen Whitney, co-founder and co-executive director at Manhattan's Museum of Mathematics.

"Summer's a great opportunity, if you're out doing things, to make math more connected with the world," he says.

Whitney says summer can be a prime time to sneak math into warm-weather activities, from a routine summer family road trip to a baseball game.

"Kids are naturally curious, and they want to be able to figure out things," he says.

Whitney gave Metro five ways to sneak math into summer activities.

Make sure they don't forget what they learned in the classroom. / CREATAS

When your kids ask that quintessential question, 'Are we there yet?' make it a math problem. Ask them to calculate how far away you are and how long it will take to reach your destination. This may also be a chance to invoke the "when I was your age" card: "When I was a kid, you had to look at the little numbers on the map and look them up," he recalls. "Now, you don't have to do that any more."

Bring children along while you shop for a camping trip or barbecue. Explain the budget and, as you approach the checkout, ask them to tabulate a rough estimate of how much everything will cost.

Point out shapes. If you are in the city, for example, ask kids what shapes they see. A building could be a rectangle, and a roof could be a triangle, to name a few. This introduces kids to, or helps them keep up with, basic geometry.

Play the 24 game. Look at the numbers on different license plates and ponder how they might add up to 24. For example, with a license plate of 2261, a child could put together that two times two is four, which equals 24 when multiplied by six.

If your child is a sports fan, teach the numbers in the game. Ask them how many hits their favorite player needs to get his batting average up.

IS CHRONIC LOW BACK PAIN
AFFECTING YOUR DAILY LIFE?

IF YOU HAVE MODERATE-TO-SEVERE CHRONIC LOW BACK PAIN, YOU MAY QUALIFY TO BE IN A CLINICAL RESEARCH STUDY OF A PAIN RELIEF STUDY DRUG.

Living with chronic low back pain is often a difficult and frustrating experience. It affects your daily life and finding a way to manage your pain isn't always easy.

While you may be taking opioids daily to manage your pain, they may not be providing enough pain relief, have lost their effectiveness over time, or you may have developed side effects. As a result, for people like you, new chronic back pain relief drugs are still needed.

Currently, local doctors are conducting a clinical research study for people with chronic low back pain. They want to evaluate the safety and effectiveness of a study drug called Oxycodone DETERx™.

If you've been diagnosed with moderate-to-severe chronic low back pain, we hope that you will consider learning more about this study.

To pre-qualify for this study, you must be:

- Between 18 and 75 years of age
- Diagnosed with moderate-to-severe chronic low back pain by your doctor
- Experiencing low back pain for a minimum of 6 months
- Currently taking an opioid, each day, for your pain

All study-related visits, tests, care, and study drugs will be provided to you at no cost. In addition, reimbursement for study-related time and travel may be provided.

IF YOU PRE-QUALIFY FOR THIS STUDY, PLEASE CONTACT:

Letters

The 'tolerant' should practice it

It's regrettable that recent appeals for tolerance have resulted in the opposite. I think that most people, regardless of where they stand on religion, are good people who have the capacity for love, compassion and tolerance. Recognizing our common humanity and being respectful of our individual differences are rational alternatives to divisiveness and injustice.

You may not need religion to be good, but I hope you can be accepting of those who do.

One path to truth

Which process is more likely to lead us to objective truth? Option one: Read that someone who heard voices long ago disapproved of shrimp and gay people. Declare one opinion to be absolute truth. Ignore the other. Done. Option two: Consider what premises seem likely to be true. Reason carefully about what conclusions follow from those premises. Re-examine whether it still seems likely that the premises are true. Repeat indefinitely. I know which approach I'm more optimistic about.

2013 STANLEY CUP FINAL – BOSTON vs. CHICAGO

Chicago stuns Bruins late, takes home Cup

NHL playoffs. Chicago raised the Cup in Boston last night thanks to a dramatic Game 6 victory, 3-2.

The Bruins began their journey to the Stanley Cup Final way back on May Day, May 1, with a 4-1 victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs at TD Garden. From there to last night, the B's developed something resembling a "team of destiny" identity, doing the unthinkable against the Leafs, crushing the Rangers, clobbering the Penguins and consistently playing late into the night and into the early morning with the Blackhawks.

The run will likely be long remembered by Boston, a city looking for a late spring and early summer distraction from the bombings at the signature sporting event on the city's calendar back in mid-April. The Bruins delivered that, but they just missed out on delivering the Stanley Cup to the city for the second time in three years as they fell to Chicago, 3-2, last night in Game 6 of the Stanley Cup Final at TD Garden.

Chicago absolutely stunned the Boston crowd with two goals in 17 seconds as Bryan Bickell scored with 76 seconds remaining and Dave Bolland found the puck off the left post and rifled it past Tuukka Rask with 59 seconds left to all but end the Bruins' 2013 season.

The Blackhawks had pulled goaltender Corey Crawford off the ice with around 90 seconds remaining and were in desperation mode. Seconds later, it was the Bruins that were scrambling.

The B's had controlled play for the majority of Game 6. At the 12:05 mark of the third period, David Krejci fiddled with the puck behind Crawford's net to set up a point-blank shot by Milan Lucic which crawled on the back of Crawford's neck before finding a home in the back of the net. Lucic's goal put Boston up by a familiar score in the 2013 Cup Final, 2-1.

The Bruins also put tremendous pressure on Crawford in the early-going and it paid off in the form of a Chris Kelly goal 7:19 into the first period. Boston controlled the puck off a faceoff and Tyler Seguin fed Kelly for a strike. The Bruins had 10 shots on goal to the Blackhawks' four through 13 minutes of the first. One play that will likely haunt Bruins fans is Krejci's missed opportunity off a brilliant centering pass by Brad Marchand late in the first on B's power play.

The Bruins were left stunned after this Jonathan Toews goal in the second period and late in the third when the Blackhawks mounted a furious comeback. / GETTY IMAGES

Ballard could help relieve Patriots' abundant issues

The 2013 offseason has been, unquestionably, the most chaotic of the Bill Belichick era in New England. Many fans were highly upset with the departure of Wes Welker to Denver. Many cringed when it was learned that Rob Gronkowski would need to have surgery on his forearm (again) and cringed (again) when it was learned that the All-Pro tight end would need to have surgery on his back (again). And many are currently talking everything but football when it comes to the situation regarding Aaron Hernandez and a deceased 27-year-old man.

One solution to the Patriots problems could come in the form of an old foe. Jake Ballard, the former tight end of the New York Giants, caught two balls for 10 yards in the last NFL game he played, Super Bowl XLVI against the Patriots. The Pats then picked up Ballard on waivers in June 2012 even though the hulking, 6-foot-6, 275-pound tight end was injured (ACL) at the time. Giants coach Tom Coughlin was said to be disgruntled at the time due to the transaction but Bill Belichick didn't seem to care.

Jake Ballard is healthy and ready to contribute. / GETTY IMAGES

"If a player's on waivers, he's on waivers," The Pats coach said last June. "I don't know what 'unwrittens' you're talking about."

Ballard had 38 catches for 604 yards and four touchdowns in 2011 with New York.

"I watched [the Patriots] all last year, just looking over the playbook and mainly doing rehab," Ballard said in May. "I got a sense of what the offense is all about." MATT BURKE
